Dasgupta's art is characterized by its bold colors, intricate patterns, and exploration of cultural and spiritual themes. She often incorporates elements of Indian mythology, folklore, and philosophy into her work, creating a visual language that is both personal and universal.

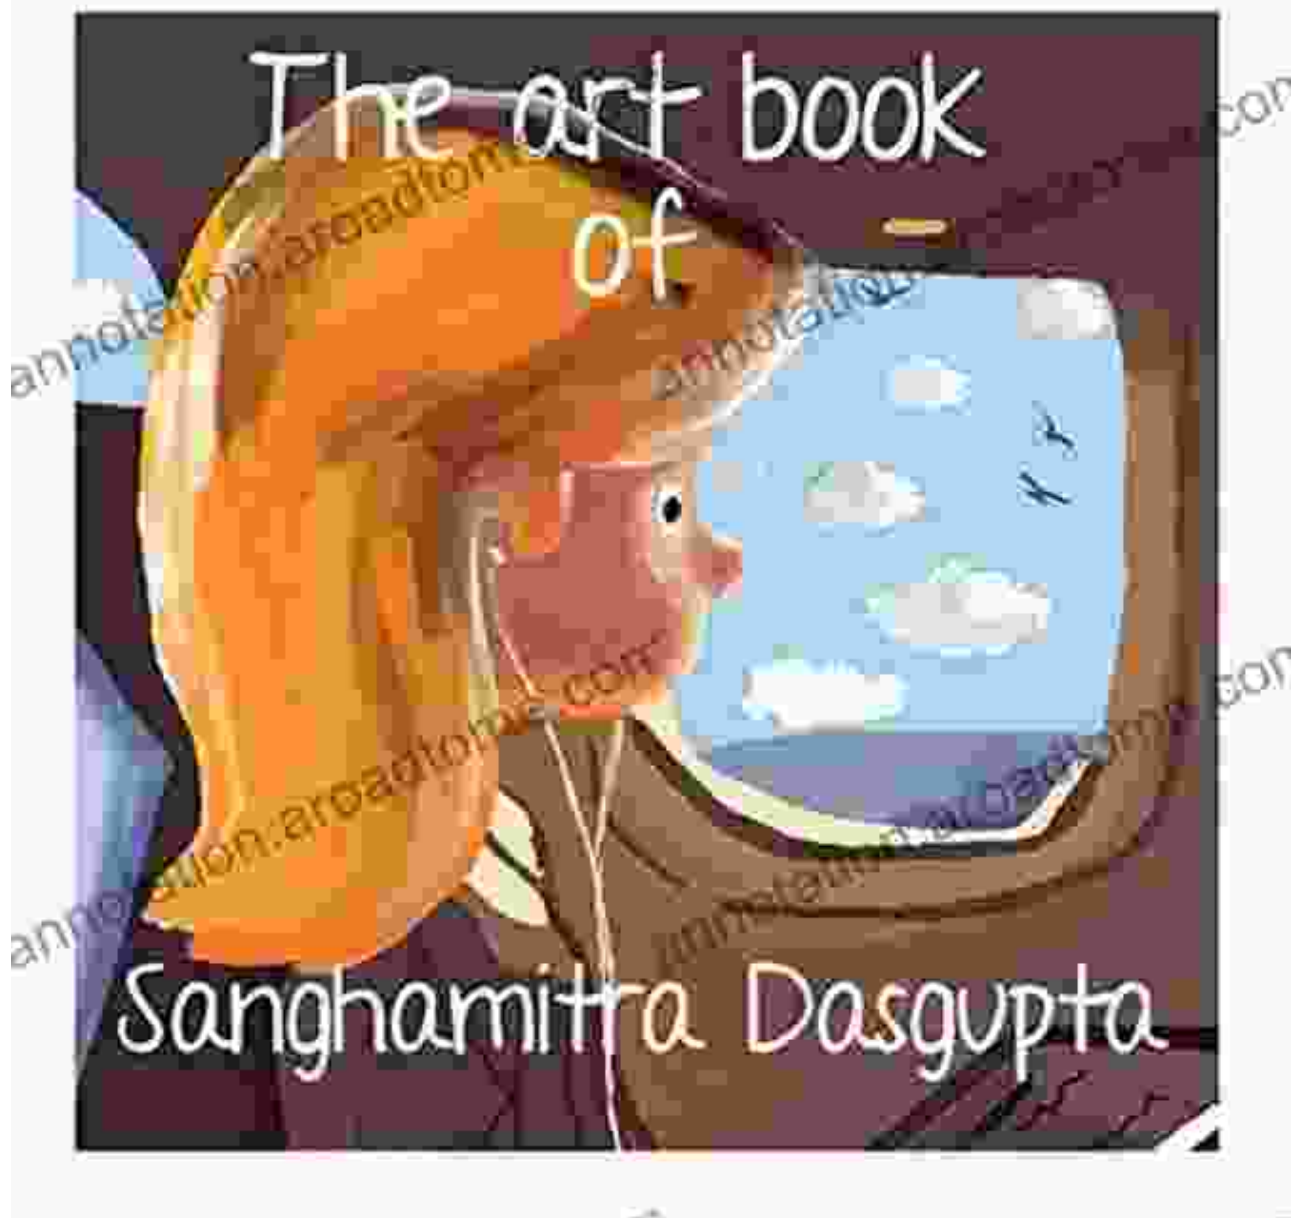

In her paintings, Dasgupta explores the relationship between the individual and the collective, the human and the divine, and the temporal and the eternal. She invites viewers to contemplate the nature of existence, the interconnectedness of all things, and the power of art to transform the human experience.

Dasgupta's work has been praised by critics for its originality, depth, and emotional resonance. She has been described as a "visionary artist" and a "master of her craft." Her paintings have been collected by private collectors and institutions around the world, and she has been the subject of numerous books and articles.

In addition to her paintings, Dasgupta is also a writer, poet, and philosopher. She has published several books and articles on art, culture, and spirituality. She is also a passionate advocate for social justice and environmental protection.

Sanghamitra Dasgupta is a true Renaissance woman, an artist whose work transcends the boundaries of genre and medium. She is a visionary artist, a master of her craft, and a passionate advocate for social justice and environmental protection. Her art is a gift to the world, a testament to the power of creativity to transform the human experience.
